Make it Count: Summer Reading Statistics

Thank you to everybody who attended our FLYP statistics webinar. I was blown away by the response. If you were unable to attend the live webinar, you can view the recording on our YouTube channel.

There is also a cheat sheet available so you can access and refer to the statistics information easily.

Survey opens: July 17, 2020
Survey closes: August 17, 2020

Virtual Brainstorming Sessions

We had three fantastic virtual brainstorming sessions with so many of you sharing ideas and challenges with one another. They were a treasure trove of information and resources. All three sessions are available on our YouTube channel.

Summer Food Resources

Communities all across Florida have stepped up to provide food to kids and teens since schools closed and are continuing to do so into the summer. Here are a couple of resources to help you and the families you work with find information on free meal services during summer.

Range is a free app that provides information for local meal spots. Range also offers free downloadable posters and other outreach materials to help spread the word.

Summer BreakSpot is a Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services website that locates nearby free grab-and-go meals. You can also use the USDA's Find Meals for Kids website.

Teen Video Challenge

Are you looking for a creative, tech-related program for your teens? The Collaborative Summer Library Program (CSLP) has released information about the 2020 Teen Video Challenge (TVC).

The Teen Video Challenge is an annual event in which teens create videos about public libraries and reading while getting creative with the Summer Reading theme. Five national winners will each win $200 cash and $50 in summer reading materials for their library.

If teens from your community participate, we would love to see their videos!

Virtual Resources

Are you looking for virtual resources to share with your families? Many summer camps remain closed, leaving families searching for ways to keep their kids engaged. Check out these free, virtual camps:
